Vision Inventory Management
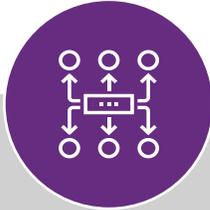

The Vision Advantage

Today's business world is a fast moving and dynamic environment – one in which your teams expect to be able to access their business-critical data quickly and easily and meet the demands and changing world of your supply chain.

Range and category management doesn't have to be a monthly or quarterly process, nor involve large teams of people manipulating raw data and providing static outputs that are out-of-date as soon as they're completed. An effective range and category management process requires daily management. You need a tool with the power to make recommendations and capture opportunities as they occur. The solution should also allow different methodologies to be deployed at different stages of an items life cycle so that you can consistently manage items from initial placement through to end of life.

Vision Inventory Mangement delivers the flexibility to review and change plans with ease, while being linked into your entire business to ensure the most efficient speed to market. Whether managed by your current team or set up using our team of category experts, Vision will integrate into your current organization with ease and deliver tangible results with limited effort and reduced cost.

The Vision Advantage is plain to see. Our customers enjoy increased sales with higher stock turns, lower retail returns and a reduced inventory stock position.
